Hanukkah is often called the Festival of Lights because the annual holiday, celebrated for eight consecutive nights, features the lighting of a nine-stemmed candelabra called the menorah. The menorah differs from other candelabras because it includes an extra candle, called the shammes or shammash, used to light the other eight candles.

According to Chabad, the menorah lighting "usually occurs at home, in a doorway or near a window." However, communal menorah lightings also occur during the eight-day celebration.

Other Hanukkah customs include playing with dreidels and eating festive foods such as latkes, or potato pancakes, and doughnuts.
